A Playground For Art — The Story Behind Paper Collective.

Elevated art for everyday spaces.

Since 2013, Paper Collective's Copenhagen home has been a Playground for Art. A safe space where creatives from all backgrounds can come together to collaborate, create and share their work with our global community of art lovers.

Alongside each artist, architect, and designer - Paper Collective has created a collection of original art prints and art solutions, all at a great price. Our collection contains a diversity that allows each artist to shine yet has a distinct language that ties the collection together. Proudly produced in-house in Denmark, our art prints are made-to-order according to the Giclée fine art printing method.

Live a Life Creative — Fall Winter Collection 2025.

Paper Collective's latest collection of original artworks is all about inspiration and expression. From sophisticated to the sublime, art for the young and those young at heart. Explore over 100 new artworks that range from Jack Tierney's stunning floral still life's, to the expert colour play of Raw Color, new artwork for our MADDO kid's collection by Anne Laval, a new body of work by one of our most loved artists Lolita Pelegrine, and much more.

This collection also extends our expressive approach to living into more areas of the home with the introduction of our new Art Trays, our 2026 Wall Calendar designed by All The Way To Paris, new sizes for our Floating Gallery Shelves, and new dual-coloured wood frames developed alongside Lex Pott.

Floating Gallery Shelf
in Polished Steel

Paper Collective visited the lively apartment of Puk Sjeldan on the canals in Copenhagen's Christianshavn district. We let Puk re-interpret our collection through her colourful lens, curating a collection of floating gallery shelves, frames and artworks that accentuated the distinct colours of her small yet striking space.

Paper Collective

Hi Puk, and thank you for allowing Paper Collective into your space. Can you start by telling me where you live in Copenhagen and what you love about this area?

Puk Sjeldan:

We live in the charming Copenhagen neighbourhood of Christianshavn, right by the canal, in one of the historic coloured houses with a view of the Church of Our Savior. Beauty is everywhere you look, and it makes my aesthetic heart happy every day — and nothing beats living by the water in the middle of the city. I've shared a guide with some of my favourite things to do in the hood on my Substack, À LA POP.

PC:

I know your apartment has a heritage listing. Can you tell me about its history and how the unique qualities of the space have shaped how you style and use your home?

Puk:

The apartment is located in a building from the mid-1750s and was originally a packhouse. It became part of Wildersgade Barracks during the 19th century until 1924 when it was converted into apartments. Due to the listing, all original details must be preserved—for example, all the woodwork has to be painted in NCS colour N-1500 and the walls have to stay white. That was a big challenge at first. The white walls felt so sterile and impersonal, and I would have loved to go colour-crazy, but instead, I focused on coloured furniture and objects. Now, I love how the white walls make the colours pop.

Still Life With Pears by Sia Marche

PC:
Alongside sharing your interior passion with people around the world as @poppelgade, you are also the co-founder of local organization Femmunity. Can you tell me about your work with the organization and the events and workshops you are regularly hosting?

Puk:
Femmunity (@femmunity.dk) is a magazine and community for fempreneurs. Only 27% of Danish entrepreneurs are women — we want to push that needle. We started Femmunity to empower and inspire women to create a work life they love. For some, that means flexibility to balance family life; for others, it's the freedom to set their own direction. And for many, it's something else entirely—turning a passion into a business, building something from scratch, or having the freedom to work in a way that feels right for them. We share the stories of inspiring women who've done just that, and we host events like our Pep Talks, where fempreneurs and those dreaming of it can come together to connect, share experiences, and get an inspiring pep talk from a fellow Solo Sister.

Glisser by Anne Laval

PC:
We love how you have used our Floating Gallery Shelves. Can you tell me about how you plan to use them going forward and why you wanted to utilise them in this way?

Puk:
I like how the shelves make it easy to change things up without making a big deal out of it. They let me play around and curate little displays that can change day to day—whether it's a framed print and a vase in the bathroom or a mix of books, objects, and records in the living room. I see them as a way to bring personality into a room without it feeling fixed. A place for things that inspire me right now—art, design, music—knowing that I can easily switch it up whenever I feel like it.

PC:
We let you curate any of the pieces within our Paper Collective catalogue, and you chose many pieces from our MADDO range of art for the whole family. What was it about these pieces that fit so well into your space?

Puk:
I was drawn to the MADDO range because it's playful, a bit quirky, and most of all, colourful. I like how the pieces add personality and joy to the space.

PC:
What advice do you have when it comes to using colour within the home, as you have such a good eye for combining bold, yet harmonious colourways.

Puk:
I love playing with contrasts, like warm and cool tones or pastels against more vibrant hues. I'm always looking for a balance where the colourful elements get to pop without taking over. Another tip is to let colours reappear in different elements within and across rooms. Even with a vibrant red, the repetition gives a sense of calm and harmony. Don't let a single colour take over your interior. It doesn't work if all your accessories are purple — it quickly becomes too overwhelming and boring. Colours are social creatures — they're better together. They complement each other, highlight each other, and create energy together. Play with the colours. Aside from indexing all the colours I test, I use my colour swatches for that. I mix and match them— and suddenly, it clicks! You can just feel it—instant attraction. Colours don't have to be a perfect match—the fun and personal touch often appears in slightly offbeat combinations. I'm writing about the use of colours on my Substack, À LA POP.

At Home With

— Noah Daniel

On a sunny day in early spring, Paper Collective visited the home of interior designer Noah Daniel. The American now calls Denmark home, and has shared his considered approach to designing his Nørrebro apartment with his followers on Youtube and beyond. We spoke to Noah about juggling content creation with his interior design business with projects spread across the Atlantic.

Ensō Red IV by Norm Architects

Paper Collective:

Hi Noah and thank you for welcoming Paper Collective into your home. To start, can you tell me about where you live in Copenhagen and how and why you ended up in the Danish capital.

Noah Daniel:

As a designer I've always had my eye on Copenhagen. During university I studied interior architecture for a semester here and absolutely fell in love with the city. So several years later when my partner and I had the opportunity to make the move we didn't hesitate for a second. We feel really lucky to have found our home here in Nørrebro, super close to so many of our favorite spots in the city.

PC:

We have been following your home stories on Youtube for some time now. Tell me about how you started sharing your interior and design stories and the journey you have made within your apartment here in Copenhagen?

Noah:

Anybody that knows me well would probably agree that it's pretty out of character that I started creating content on Youtube. Honestly I was

Peaches by Liat Greenberg

Composition with Fish by Adee Ardon

just seeing so much interior design content on social media that felt like it lacked substance, so I decided to start sharing my thoughts on design & architecture. I'm extremely passionate about my design values so it feels really special to share those concepts and hear that it's resonated with so many people.

PC:

Alongside your Youtube channel, you are also working on several interior design projects. Can you tell me about how you juggle these two areas at the same time and some of the projects you are currently working on.

Noah:

It definitely gets busy! I'm currently working on homes in Denmark, Germany, Italy, & the US. I genuinely feel so grateful that my career has brought me to a place that I'm able to take on so many different projects in such different contexts. Balancing my time between design projects and creating content has definitely been (and continues to be) a huge learning curve. It really forces you to carefully consider where your time & energy is best spent.

PC:

You chose some lovely and eclectic pieces from our collection to display within your home. Can you tell me about some of the standout pieces and why they work so well within your space?

Noah:

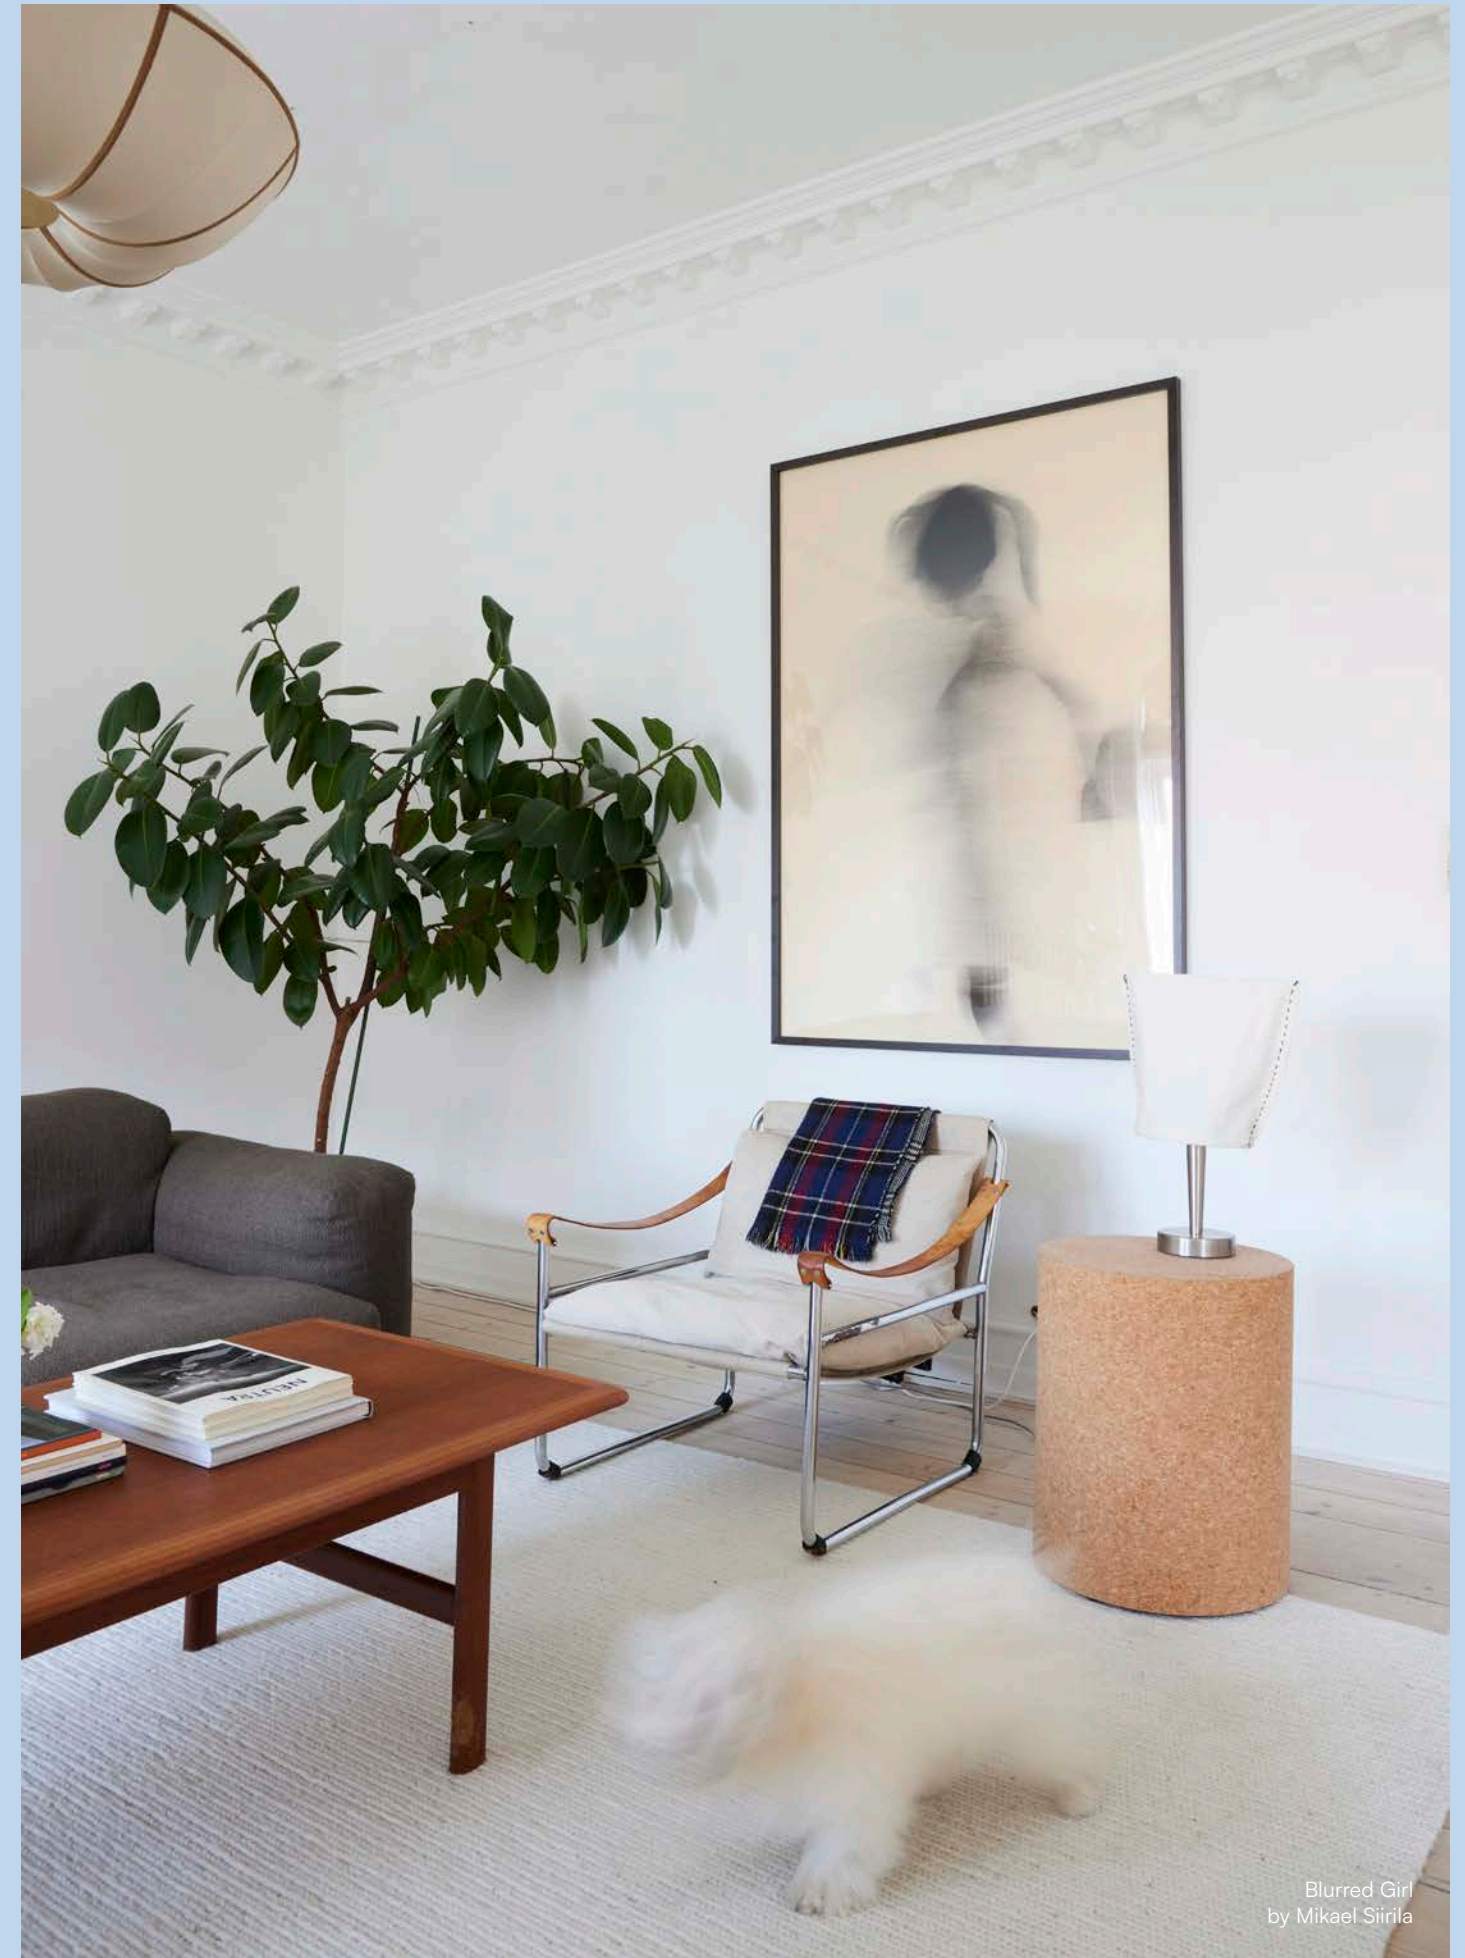

I'm most excited about the large Blurred Girl print by Mikael Siirilä in our living room. Since we moved in I've known that I wanted an oversized piece of art in this location, and this photograph really spoke to my partner and I. The composition and contrast of the piece does a great job of meeting the scale of the room - it really brings a level of coziness to the seating area that I'm super happy with.

PC:

Do you have any tips for our community on how to incorporate contemporary art within their home?

Noah:

I would say that it's most important to first source pieces that you're genuinely drawn to, and then secondarily find the right spot for them in your home by considering things like color, scale, texture, etc. One of the biggest mistakes I see people make is buying art solely to fill a spot in their home. That approach can often lead to interiors that feel pretty soulless.

LET THE LIGHT IN!

3daysofdesign

For 3daysofdesign 2025, Paper Collective teamed up with Spanish furniture brand Sancal to present Let The Light In! The curated exhibition celebrated two brands that cross the boundaries between art and design and allow themselves to be lit up by the spark of creativity.

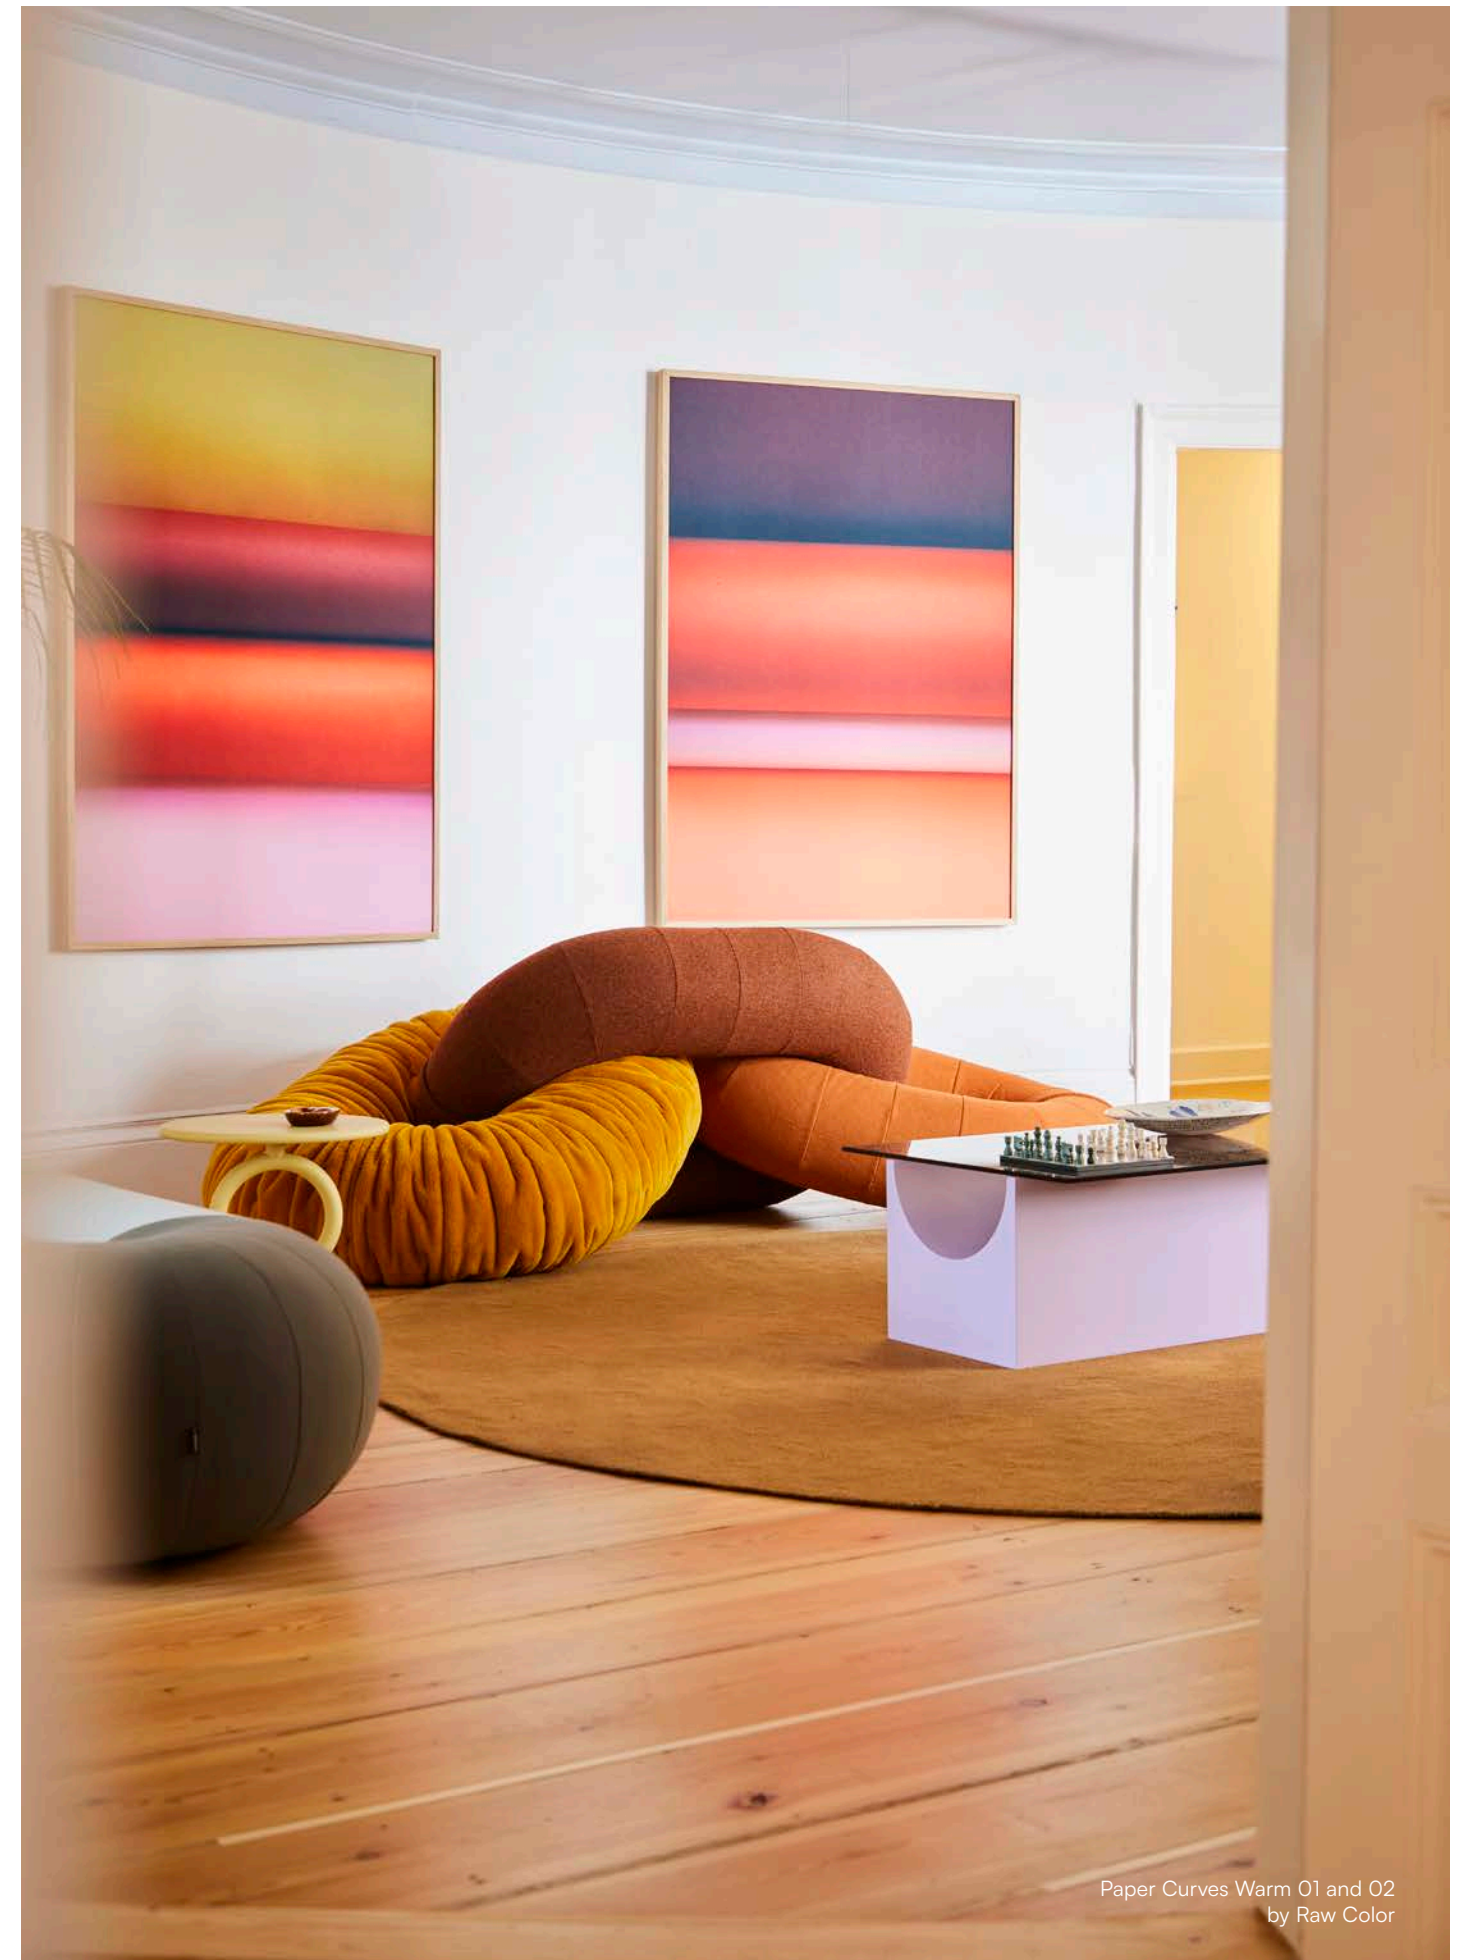

For the occasion, Paper Collective presented three collections that re-affirm our strong connection with the design industry. All The Way to Paris presented “A Year of Greens” — our 2026 Wall Calendar and accompanying collection of 12 art prints, Dutch design studio Raw Color displayed a series of 8 photographic art prints that focused on colour relationships, and Lex Pott presented his Absorb collection that merges our dual-coloured wooden frames with a bold and colourful collection of art prints.

Artist Spotlight: Raw Color

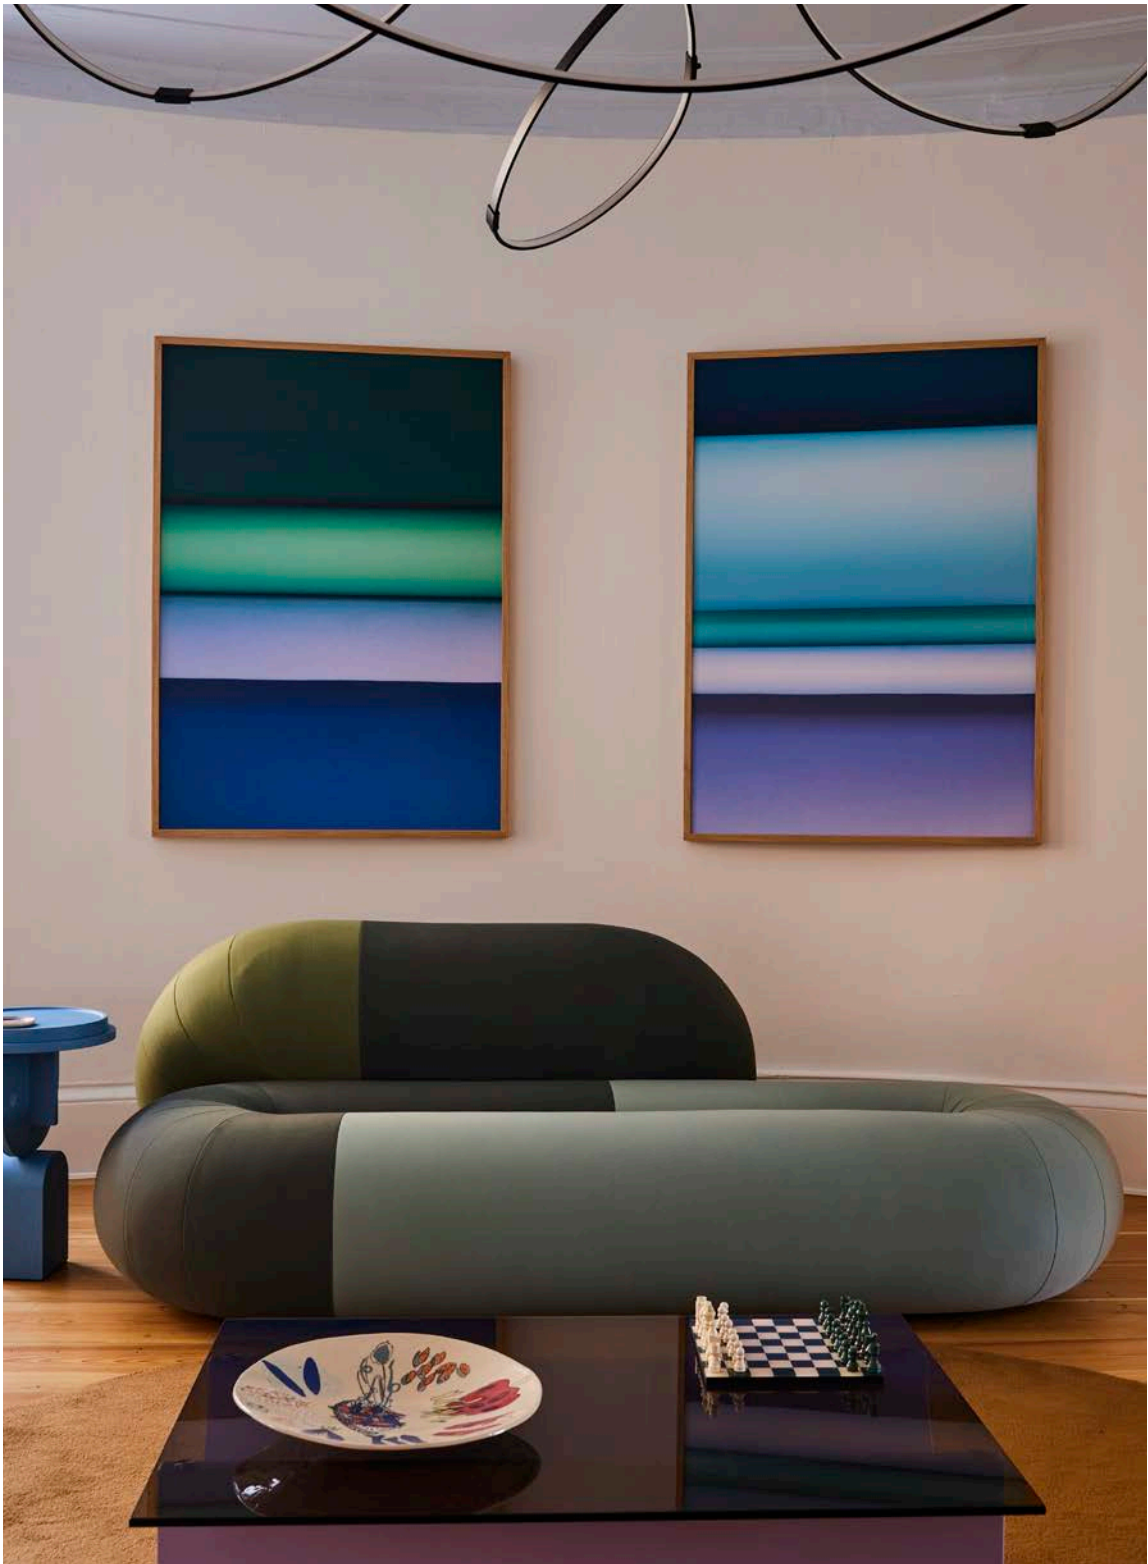

Paper Curves is a photographic print collection from the Dutch duo Raw Color that highlights colour surfaces, paper texture and lens physics. Crafted by hand from rolled paper compositions, the analogue nature of the creative process is enhanced by points of focus and blur created by a shifting photographic depth of field.

by Raw Color

What can we do with colour? In their recent talk during 3daysofdesign, Daniera ter Haar and Christoph Brach reminded us that colour is not just visual or emotional. “It’s tactile, spatial, and temporal. But above all, something very personal”. — Raw Color

Artist Spotlight: Lex Pott

The Absorb collection by Dutch designer Lex Pott merges together artwork and frame through a celebration of continuous colour. Created as a visual extension of Paper Collective's duo-tone coloured pine frames, each colourway is available in six unique patterns that spread and intertwine vibrant tones in and out of one-another.

Artist Spotlight: All The Way To Paris

A Year of Greens 2026 wall calendar and corresponding art print collection by Copenhagen design studio All The Way To Paris celebrates freshly foraged garden finds from throughout the year. Created in rich watercolours and pencil, the collection takes you from the earthy winter months to the fresh foliage of summer - a reminder to source from your own backyard.

“The compositions of curved papers have been created by hand. Their analogue construction is visible through the organic behaviour of the material. The subtle paper texture is enhanced by the prints that are larger than the original composition, making it a tactile viewing experience.”

Art for the whole family.

With MADO, Paper Collective curates a collection of educational, kind, loving and well-made products based on iconic graphics and poetic illustrations. The name MADO is Japanese for window, and we want our artworks to act as a window to the world for your children. A window that provides insight, outlook and through which many an adventure awaits. Play, Live, Dare and Love with MADO.

Cars 02
by Anastacia Sholik

New Collection by MADO

From bright and colourful cars to soft animals and totemic characters, the latest MADO collection has something for all ages and interests. The first collection is by Ukranian artist Anastacia Sholik. Cars is a set of three artworks inspired by times drawing with her son. Liat Greenberg's The Hen and The Hatchling present soft watercolours that create a sense of warmth within your home, while Anne Laval has brought her mixed-medium approach to three playful characters created through collage.

Personnage Cape
by Anne Laval

“These characters were born from a mixture of paper cutouts and drawings, gouache, and pastels. These small, colourful beings are a cross between a toy puppet and a nature spirit.”
